Yesterday afternoon set (1) misty and cold. I had (2) a mind to spend it by my study fire, (3) of wading through heath and mud to Wuthering Heights. On coming up from dinner, however, (N.B. The passage below is taken from Wuthering Heights, by Emily Brontë. The paragraphs labelled A–F are in the wrong order. Put them into the correct order.

A	"Thrushcross Grange is my own, sir," he interrupted, wincing. "I should not allow anyone to inconvenience me, if I could hinder it—walk in!"

B	"Mr. Heathcliff?" I said.

C	1801.—I have just returned from a visit to my landlord—the solitary neighbour that I shall be troubled with. This is certainly a beautiful country! In all England, I do not believe that I could have fixed on a situation so completely removed from the stir of society. A perfect misanthropist's heaven—and Mr. Heathcliff and I are such a suitable pair to divide the desolation between us. A capital fellow! He little imagined how my heart warmed towards him when I beheld his black eyes withdraw so suspiciously under their brows, as I rode up, and when his fingers sheltered themselves, with a jealous resolution, still further in his waistcoat, as I announced my name.

D	The "walk in" was uttered with closed teeth, and expressed the sentiment, "Go to the Deuce", even the gate over which he leant manifested no sympathising movement to the words; and I think that circumstance determined me to accept the invitation: I felt interested in a man who seemed more exaggeratedly reserved than myself.

E	A nod was the answer.

F	"Mr. Lockwood, your new tenant, sir. I do myself the honour of calling as soon as possible after my arrival, to express the hope that I have not inconvenienced you by my perseverance in soliciting the occupation of Thrushcross Grange: I heard yesterday you had had some thoughts—"

Wuthering Heights

by Emily Brontë

In this extract, Mr Lockwood has been to visit Heathcliff at Wuthering Heights. A blizzard forces Lockwood to stay for the night and Zillah, the housekeeper at Wuthering Heights, takes Lockwood up to the room where he will stay.

While leading the way upstairs, she recommended that I should hide the candle, and not make a noise, for her master had an odd notion about the chamber she would put me in, and never let anybody lodge there willingly.

I asked the reason.

She did not know, she answered; she had only lived there a year or two; and they had so many queer goings on, she could not begin to be curious.

Too stupefied to be curious myself, I fastened my door and glanced round for the bed. The whole furniture consisted of a chair, a clothes-press, and a large oak case, with squares cut out near the top, resembling coach windows.

Having approached this structure, I looked inside, and perceived it to be a singular sort of old-fashioned couch, very conveniently designed to obviate the necessity for every member of the family having a room to himself. In fact, it formed a little closet, and the ledge of a window, which it enclosed, served as a table.

I slid back the panelled sides, got in with my light, pulled them together again, and felt secure against the vigilance of Heathcliff, and everyone else.

The ledge, where I placed my candle, had a few mildewed books piled up in one corner; and it was covered with writing scratched on the paint. This writing, however, was nothing but a name repeated in all kinds of characters, large and small—Catherine Earnshaw; here and there varied to Catherine Heathcliff, and then again to Catherine Linton.

In vapid listlessness I leant my head against the window, and continued spelling over Catherine Earnshaw—Heathcliff—Linton, till my eyes closed; but they had not rested five minutes when a glare of white letters started from the dark, as vivid as spectres—the air swarmed with Catherines; and rousing myself to dispel the obtrusive name, I discovered my candle-wick reclining on one of the antique volumes, and perfuming the place with an odour of roasted calf-skin. I snuffed it off, and, very ill at ease under the influence of cold and lingering nausea, sat up and spread open the injured tome on my knee. It was a Testament, in lean type, and smelling dreadfully musty: a fly-leaf bore the inscription—'Catherine Earnshaw, her book,' and a date some quarter of a century back.

I shut it, and took up another and another, till I had examined all. Catherine's library was select, and its state of dilapidation proved it to have been well used, though not altogether for a legitimate purpose: scarcely one chapter had escaped, a pen-and-ink commentary—at least the appearance of one—covering every morsel of blank that the printer had left.

Some were detached sentences; other parts took the form of a regular diary, scrawled in an unformed, childish hand. At the top of an extra page (quite a treasure, probably, when first lighted on), I was greatly amused to behold an excellent caricature of my friend Joseph,—rudely, yet powerfully sketched.

An immediate interest kindled within me for the unknown Catherine, and I began, forthwith, to decipher her faded hieroglyphics.

Answer the questions below. Look at the passage again if you need to.
You should choose the best answer and mark its letter on your answer sheet.

17 Why did Zillah tell Mr Lockwood to hide the candle (line 1)?

A She did not want the light from the candle to annoy her master.
B She knew that her master would be concerned about the fire hazard posed by a candle.
C She did not want her master to know which room she was taking Mr Lockwood to.

18 Why did the bed 'obviate the necessity for every member of the family having a room to himself' (lines 11-12)?

D The bed was big enough for more than one person.
E The bed did not take up much space.
F The bed offered privacy.
G The bed could be folded away.

19 What was the 'large oak case' (lines 8–9) used for?

H to enclose the bed
I as a decorative model coach
J to act as a table
K to store books

20 What do the words 'all kinds of characters' (line 19) tell us?

L Catherine was a complicated character.
M 'Catherine' was scratched on the ledge in different styles of writing.
N More than one person called 'Catherine' had lived in the house.

The passage below is taken from A Boy in Winter, by Rachel Seiffert. Read it carefully and then answer the questions that follow.

Ducked and noiseless, hurrying through the fog drifts with his brother just behind him; feeling the tug of his small fingers twisted in a fistful of his jerkin, crossing the cobbles of the empty town streets, just as day is breaking.

Already they have made it past the railway station, the distillery and the cooper's yard, and then all along the silent length of the market street. Unseen, unheard—at least as yet.

When they reach the old church at the corner, the boy stops, pulling his young brother close, pressing both of them to the stone walls and listening a moment.

Answer the questions by choosing the best answer.
Look at the passage again if you need to.

76 What time of day was it?

A early in the morning
B the middle of the night
C We do not know.
D late in the evening

77 Why was the market street silent?

E Everybody there was working quietly.
F Nobody wanted to be outside because of the fog.
G Nobody was about because of the time of day.
H It had closed down due to lack of customers.

The passage below is taken from The Wind in the Willows, by Kenneth Grahame. Twenty words and punctuation marks have been removed.

For each numbered space, choose the correct spelling or punctuation mark from the two options given and mark its letter on your answer sheet.

The floor was well-worn red brick, and on the wide (79) burnt a fire of logs, between two attractive chimney-corners tucked away in the wall (80) well out of any (81) of draught. A couple of high (82) backed settles, facing each other on either side of the fire, gave further sitting (83) for the sociably disposed. In the middle of the room stood a long table of (84) boards placed on trestles, with benches down each side. At one end of it (85) where an arm-chair stood pushed back, were spread the remains of the Badger (86) s plain but ample supper. Rows of spotless plates winked from the (87) of the dresser at the far end of the room, and from the rafters overhead hung hams, bundles of dried herbs, nets of onions, and baskets of eggs. It seemed a place where (88) could fitly feast after victory, where weary harvesters could line up in scores along the table and keep their Harvest Home with mirth and song, or where two or three (89) of simple tastes could sit about as they pleased and eat and smoke and talk in comfort and contentment. The ruddy brick floor smiled up at the smoky ceiling (90) the oaken settles, (91) with long (92), exchanged cheerful glances with each other; plates on the dresser grinned at pots on the shelf, and the merry firelight flickered and played over everything without (93).
The kindly Badger thrust them down on a settle to toast themselves at the fire, and bade them remove (94) wet coats and boots. Then he fetched them dressing (95) gowns and slippers, and himself bathed the Mole's shin with warm water and mended the cut with sticking-plaster till the (96) thing was just as good as new, if not better. In the embracing light and warmth, warm and dry at last, with weary legs propped up in front of them, and a (97) clink of plates being arranged on the table behind, it seemed to the storm-driven animals, now in safe (98), that the cold and trackless Wild Wood just left outside was miles and miles away, and all that they had suffered in it a half-forgotten dream.

26 The grid below is made of square centimetres.

One vertex of a regular trapezium is at point A (–3, 3).

The location of the second vertex is found by reflecting point A in the y-axis.

The location of the third vertex is found by translating point A two squares to the right and four squares down.

Find the location of the fourth vertex and then work out the area of the trapezium in cm^2.

In each of the following questions, the numbers inside the brackets are somehow calculated from the numbers outside the brackets. For example:

3 [15] 5 7 [21] 3 6 [ ] 2 The answer is 12.

The number inside the brackets is calculated my multiplying the two numbers on either side of the brackets.

For questions 27–30, work out how the numbers in brackets are calculated and then find the missing number.

27 2 [13] 3 1 [50] 7 5 [ ] 5

28 13 [49] 6 7 [36] 1 9 [ ] 5

29 4 [6] 3 4 [14] 7 6 [ ] 8

11+ Kingston – Practice Test 1 – Answer Sheets

English Practice Test

Please mark boxes with a thin horizontal like this:

In the first example, on the left, the answer selected is C.

In the second example, on the right, the answer selected is J.

A line is drawn through the letter. It may go outside the brackets, but MUST NOT cross the outer border of the box.

Maths Practice Test

For multiple-choice questions, please mark boxes in the same way as shown above.

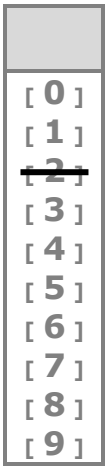

For questions that require numerical answers, there will be columns that represent units, tens, hundreds and thousands.

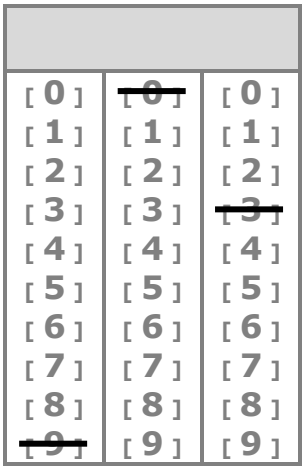

For a single-digit answer, there will be one column on the answer sheet in which to record your answer.

For a 2-digit answer, there will be two columns on the answer sheet.

For a 3-digit answer, there will be three columns on the answer sheet, and so on.

In the first example, on the left, a single-digit answer of 2 is marked.

In the second example, on the right, a 3-digit answer of 903 is marked.

A time answer would be given as a 4-digit answer like a 24-hour digital clock and a money answer would be given in pounds as a decimal number.

In the first example, on the left, an answer of quarter past 6 in the morning (06:15) is marked.

In the second example, on the right, an answer of 10 pounds and 25 pence (£10.25) is marked.

A line is drawn through each digit. It may go outside the brackets, but MUST NOT cross the outer border of the box.
