The Sandpiper's Trick

by Celia Thaxter

The sandpiper is a wading bird with a long bill and long legs. They typically nest on the ground in open areas.

One lovely afternoon in May I had been wandering up and down, through rocky gorges, by little swampy bits of ground, and on the tops of windy headlands, looking for flowers, and had found many: large blue violets, the like of which you never saw; white violets too, creamy and fragrant; gentle little houstonias; gay and dancing erythroniums; and wind-flowers delicately tinted, blue, straw-colour, pink and purple. I never found such in the mainland valleys; the salt air of the sea deepens the colours of all flowers. I stopped by a swamp which the recent rains had filled and turned to a little lake. Light green iris-leaves cut the water like sharp and slender swords, and in the low sunshine that streamed across, threw long shadows over the shining surface.

Some blackbirds were calling sweetly in a clump of bushes, and song-sparrows sang as if they had but one hour in which to crowd the whole raptures of the spring. As I pressed through the budding bayberry bushes to reach some milk-white sprays of shadbush which grew by the waterside, I startled three curfews. They flew away, trailing their long legs and whistling fine and clear. I stood still to watch them out of sight. How full the air was of pleasant sounds! The very waves made a glad noise about the rocks, and the whole sea seemed to roar afar off, as if half asleep and murmuring in a kind of gentle dream. The flock of sheep was scattered here and there, all washed as white as snow by the plenteous rains and nibbling the new grass eagerly; and from near and far came the tender and plaintive cries of the young lambs.

Going on again, I came to the edge of a little beach, and presently I was startled by a sound of such terror and distress that it went to my heart at once. In a moment, a poor little sandpiper emerged from the bushes, dragging itself along in such a way that, had you seen it, you would have concluded that every bone in its body had been broken. Such a dilapidated bird! Its wings drooped and its legs hung as if almost lifeless. It uttered continually a shrill cry of pain and kept just out of the reach of my hand, fluttering hither and thither, as if wounded and weary. At first, I was amazed, and cried out, "Why, friend and gossip! What is the matter?" and then stood watching it in mute dismay.

Suddenly it flashed across me that this was only my sandpiper's way of concealing from me a nest; and I remembered reading about this little trick of hers in a book of natural history. The object was to make me follow her by pretending that she could not fly, and so lead me away from her treasure. So, I stood perfectly still, lest I should tread on the precious habitation, and quietly observed my deceitful little friend.

Her apparently desperate and hopeless condition grew so comical when I reflected that it was only affectation, that I could not help laughing, loud and long. "Dear gossip," I called to her, "pray don't give yourself so much unnecessary trouble! You might know I wouldn't hurt you or your nest for the world, you most absurd of birds!"

As if she understood me, and as if she could not bear being ridiculed, up she rose at once, strong and graceful, and flew off with a full, round, clear note, delicious to hear.

Then I cautiously looked for the nest, and found it quite close to my feet, near the stem of a stunted bayberry bush. Mrs Sandpiper had only drawn together a few bayberry leaves, brown and glossy, a little pale green lichen, and a twig or two, and that was a pretty enough house for her. Four eggs, about as large as robins', were within, all laid evenly with the small ends together, as is the tidy fashion of the Sandpiper family. No wonder I did not see them; for they were pale green like the lichen, with brown spots the colour of leaves and twigs, and they seemed a part of the ground, with its confusion of soft neutral tints. I couldn't admire them enough, but to relieve my little friend's anxiety, I soon walked away. As I walked away, I marvelled much that so very small a head should contain such an amount of cunning.

A	"To whom does this wretched horse belong?" he shouted wrathfully. "What business has it here?"

B	"Surely some great injustice has been done," they cried, shaking off their languor and hastening to the square. To their amazement they found it empty of all human beings save themselves; no angry supplicant appealed for justice, but a poor old horse, lame and half blind, with bones that nearly broke through his skin, was trying with pathetic eagerness to eat the wisp of hay. In struggling to do this, he had rung the bell, and the judge, summoned so hastily for so slight a cause, was stirred to indignation.

C	"Sir, he belongs to a rich nobleman, who lives in that splendid palace whose tall towers glisten white above the palm-grove," said an old man, coming forward with a deep bow. "Time was that he bore his master to battle, carrying him dauntlessly amid shot and shell, and more than once saving his life by his courage and fleetness. When the horse became old and feeble, he was turned adrift, since his master had no further use for him; and now the poor creature picks up what food he can in highways and byways.

D	The great desire of good King John was that every man, woman and child in his dominions should be able to obtain justice without delay, be they rich or poor. To this end, since he could not possibly listen to all himself, he hung a bell in one of the city towers and issued a proclamation to say that when this was rung a magistrate would immediately proceed to the public square and administer justice in his name. The plan worked admirably; both rich and poor were satisfied, and since they knew that evil-doers would be quickly punished, and wrongs set right, men hesitated to defraud or oppress their neighbours, and the great bell pealed less often as years went on.

E	A wise and just monarch was the good King John. His kingdom extended over central Italy and included the famous town of Atri, which in days gone by had been a famous harbour on the shores of the Adriatic. Now the sea had retreated from it, and it lay inland; no longer the crested waves rolled on its borders, or tossed their showers of silver spray to meet the vivid turquoise of the sky.

F	In the course of time, however, the bell-rope wore thin and some ingenious citizen fastened a wisp of hay to it, that this might serve as a handle. One day in the height of summer, when the deserted square was blazing with sunlight, and most of the citizens were taking their noonday rest, their siesta was disturbed by the violent pealing of the bell.

Black Beauty

by Anna Sewell

In the following extract, Ginger, a chestnut horse, is telling Black Beauty about her upbringing and the rough handling she experienced.

"There was one — the old master, Mr Ryder — who, I think, could soon have brought me round, and could have done anything with me; but he had given up all the hard part of the trade to his son and to another experienced man, and he only came at times to oversee. His son was a strong, tall, bold man; they called him Samson, and he used to boast that he had never found a horse that could throw him. There was no gentleness in him, as there was in his father, but only hardness, a hard voice, a hard eye, a hard hand; and I felt from the first that what he wanted was to wear all the spirit out of me, and just make me into a quiet, humble, obedient piece of horse-flesh. 'Horse-flesh!' Yes, that is all he thought about," and Ginger stamped her foot as if the very thought of him made her angry. Then she went on:

"If I did not do exactly what he wanted, he would get put out, and make me run around with that long rein in the training field till he had tired me out. I think he drank a good deal, and I am quite sure that the oftener he drank the worse it was for me. One day he had worked me hard in every way he could, and when I lay down, I was tired, and miserable, and angry; it all seemed so hard. The next morning, he came for me early, and ran me around again for a long time. I had scarcely had an hour's rest, when he came again for me with a saddle and a bridle and a new kind of bit. I could never quite tell how it came about; he had only just mounted me on the training ground, when something I did put him out of temper, and he chucked me hard with the rein. The new bit was very painful, and I reared up suddenly, which angered him still more, and he began to flog me. I felt my whole spirit set against him, and I began to kick, and plunge, and rear as I had never done before, and we had a regular fight; for a long time he stuck to the saddle and punished me cruelly with his whip and spurs, but my blood was thoroughly up, and I cared for nothing he could do if only I could get him off. At last, after a terrible struggle, I threw him off backwards. I heard him fall heavily on the turf, and without looking behind me, I galloped off to the other end of the field; there I saw my persecutor slowly rising from the ground and going into the stable. I stood under an oak tree and watched, but no one came to catch me. The time went on, and the sun was very hot; the flies swarmed around me and settled on my bleeding flanks where the spurs had dug in. I felt hungry, for I had not eaten since the early morning, but there was not enough grass in that meadow for a goose to live on. I wanted to lie down and rest, but with the saddle strapped tightly on, there was no comfort, and there was not a drop of water to drink. The afternoon wore on, and the sun got low. I saw the other colts led in, and I knew they were having a good feed…"

Answer the questions below. Look at the passage again if you need to.
You should choose the best answer and mark its letter on your answer sheet.

17 How did Ginger feel towards 'the old master, Mr Ryder' (line 1)?

A She seemed to respect him.
B She despised him.
C She adored him.
D She was ambivalent towards him.

18 What was the most likely reason that Mr Ryder 'had given up all the hard part of the trade' (lines 2–3)?

E his son wanted to do all the hard work
F he was lazy
G his age

19 What does the repetition of the word 'hard' in line 7 emphasise?

H how big and solid Samson was
I how hard Samson's life was J how hard Ginger's life was
K how there was nothing gentle about Samson

20 What does the use of the words 'horse-flesh' suggest (line 9)?

L Samson did not see horses as living animals with feelings.
M Samson intended to eat Ginger when she was older and fatter.
N Samson wanted his horses to look amazing.

21 'he would get put out' (line 12)

What does this mean?

O Ginger would be put out into the field.
P Samson would walk away.
Q Samson would get annoyed.
R Samson would go outside.
S Ginger would be taken out of the stable.

22 Which of the following best describes Samson's behaviour towards Ginger?

T heavy-handed and unkind
U firm, but fair
V tough, but loving
W reasonable

23 Which one of the following statements is true?

A Nobody would have been able to tame Ginger.
B Ginger decided to throw Samson off before Samson had even mounted her.
C Samson landed on his stomach.
D Samson landed on cobblestones.
E It was not easy for Ginger to throw Samson off.

24 'without looking behind me' (line 28)

Why do you think Ginger did not look behind her?

F She was too injured to turn her head.
G She was terrified she had hurt Samson.
H Her priority was to get away from Samson.

25 What was the most likely reason for Ginger choosing to stand 'under an oak tree' (line 30)?

I so she could nibble on the tree
J to shelter from rain
K to be in the shade
L so Samson did not know where she was

The passage below is taken from The Story of the Late Mr Elvesham, by H. G. Wells. Read it carefully and then answer the questions that follow.

I was taking a pair of shoes to be mended at a shop in Tottenham Court Road when I first encountered the little old man, with whom my life has now become so inextricably entangled. He was standing on the kerb, and staring at the number on the door in a doubtful way, as I opened it. His eyes — they were dull grey eyes, and reddish under the rims — fell to my face, and his countenance immediately assumed an expression of amiability.

"You come," he said, "apt to the moment. I had forgotten the number of your house. How do you do Mr Eden?"

I was a little astonished at his familiar address, for I had never set eyes on the man before. I was a little annoyed at his catching me with my boots under my arm. He noticed my lack of cordiality.

"Wonder who the deuce I am, eh? A friend, let me assure you. I have seen you before, though you haven't seen me. Is there anywhere where I can talk to you?"

I hesitated. The shabbiness of my room upstairs was not a matter for every stranger.

"Perhaps," said I, "we might walk down the street. I'm unfortunately prevented —" My gesture explained the sentence before I had spoken it.

"The very thing," he said, and faced this way and then that. "The street? Which way shall we go?" I slipped my boots down in the passage. "Look here!" he said abruptly; "this business of mine is a rigmarole. Come and lunch with me, Mr Eden. I'm an old man, a very old man, and not good at explanations, and what with my piping voice and the clatter of traffic —"

He laid a persuasive, skinny hand that trembled a little upon my arm.

B Mr Eden and the old man meet up just the once.
C The old man moved in with Mr Eden.
D Mr Eden and the old man become best friends.

77 Why doesn't Mr Eden invite the old man up to his room?

E He doesn't want him seeing how messy it is.
F He wants to take his boots to the shop.
G He is scared of him.
H He does not think the old man would manage the stairs.

78 What concerns the old man about 'the clatter of traffic'?

I the fumes from the cars making him ill
J getting run over
K Mr Eden not being able to hear what he has to say
L somebody driving past recognising him

The passage below is taken from The House and the Brain, by E. Bulwer Lytton. Twenty words and punctuation marks have been removed.

For each numbered space, choose the correct spelling or punctuation mark from the two options given and mark its letter on your answer sheet.

A friend of mine, who is a man of letters and a (79), said to me one day as if between jest and earnest (80) "Fancy! Since we last met I have discovered a haunted house in the midst of London."

"Really haunted? And by what — ghosts (81)"

"Well, I can (82) t answer these questions; all I know is this (83) six weeks ago, I and my wife were in search of a furnished apartment. Passing a quiet street, we saw on the window of one of the houses a bill, 'Apartments Furnished'. The (84) suited us; we entered the house, liked the rooms (85) engaged them by the week, and left them the third day. No power could have (86) my wife to stay longer; and I don't wonder at it."

"What did you see? (87)

"Excuse me; I have no desire to be ridiculed as a (88) dreamer, nor (89) on the other hand, could I ask you to accept on my affirmation what you would hold to be (90), without the evidence of your own senses (91) Let me only say this: it was not so much what we saw or heard (in which you might fairly (92) that we were the dupes of our own excited fancy, or the victims of (93) in others (94) that drove us away, as it was an (95) terror which (96) both of us whenever we passed by the door of a certain unfurnished room, in which we neither saw nor heard anything; and the strangest (97) of all was, that for once I agreed with my wife, silly woman though she be, and allowed after the third night that it was impossible to stay a (98) in that house."

We count in Base 10.

Base 10:
1: 1 is in the 1st column – it is the units digit.
10: 1 is in the 2nd column and 0 is in the 1st column.
100 (10^2): 1 is in the 3rd column and 0 is in the 1st and 2nd columns.
1000 (10^3): 1 is in the 4th column and 0 is in the 1st, 2nd and 3rd columns.

Consider counting in Base 4:
With Base 10, the units go up to 9 and the next number is 10.
With Base 4, the units go up to 3 and the next number is 10.
Therefore, with Base 4, the digits 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 are obsolete.

Here are some comparisons between numbers in Base 4 and Base 10.

Base 4	Base 10
1 (1 unit)	1
2 (2 units)	2
10 (4 units)	4
13 (1 × 4 + 3 units)	7
20 (2 × 4)	8
30 (3 × 4)	12
100 (4^2)	16
101 (1 × 16 + 1 unit)	17
1000 (4^3)	64

English Practice Test

Please mark boxes with a thin horizontal like this:

In the first example, on the left, the answer selected is C.

In the second example, on the right, the answer selected is J.

A line is drawn through the letter. It may go outside the brackets, but MUST NOT cross the outer border of the box.

Maths Practice Test

For multiple-choice questions, please mark boxes in the same way as shown above.

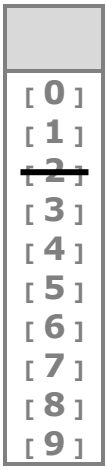

For questions that require numerical answers, there will be columns that represent units, tens, hundreds and thousands.

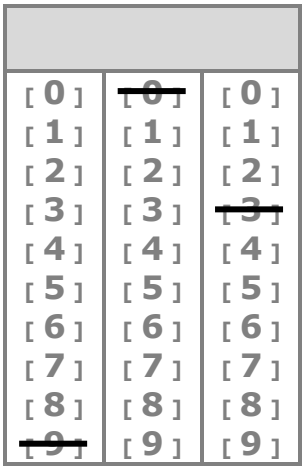

For a single-digit answer, there will be one column on the answer sheet in which to record your answer.

For a 2-digit answer, there will be two columns on the answer sheet.

For a 3-digit answer, there will be three columns on the answer sheet, and so on.

In the first example, on the left, a single-digit answer of 2 is marked.

In the second example, on the right, a 3-digit answer of 903 is marked.

A time answer would be given as a 4-digit answer like a 24-hour digital clock and a money answer would be given in pounds as a decimal number.

In the first example, on the left, an answer of quarter past 6 in the morning (06:15) is marked.

In the second example, on the right, an answer of 10 pounds and 25 pence (£10.25) is marked.

A line is drawn through each digit. It may go outside the brackets, but MUST NOT cross the outer border of the box.
