A Winter of Content

by Laura Lee Davidson

Laura Lee Davidson, the author, spent a winter alone, at the start of the First World War, on a rocky island that her family often used as a summer retreat.

A small, rocky island in a lake, a canoe paddling away across the blue water, a woman standing on a narrow strip of beach, looking after it. I was the woman left on the shore, the canoe held my companions of the past summer, the island was to be my home until another summer should bring them back again.

There is no denying that I was frightened as I turned back along the trail toward the little house among the birches. It was hard work to keep from jumping into a boat and putting out after the canoe that was rounding the point and leaving me alone. Little chilly fears laid icy fingers on the back of my neck. A shadow slipped between the trees; a sigh whispered among the leaves. I wanted to see all around me; I wanted to put my back against a wall. A little, grinning goblin of misgiving stuck out an impudent tongue as it quoted some of the jeers of unsympathetic friends and relatives, who had derided my plan for borrowing the camp, when summer was gone, and staying on alone at the Lake of Many Islands.

"Goodbye," had smiled my sister. "You say you mean to stay a year, but you'll tire of solitude long before the winter. We'll see you back at Thanksgiving."

It was only mid-September, but I wanted to see her then at that very instant. There had been a farewell dinner, the family assembled, to prophesy disaster.

"You'll freeze your nose and ears off," mourned a reassuring aunt.

In vain I reminded her that no inhabitant seen in five summers' sojourn at the lake had been without a nose or ears; all had the requisite number of features, although some of those features had withstood the cold of well-nigh a hundred winters. But she was not consoled, and continued to regard me so tearfully that I felt sure that she was bidding farewell to my nose.

"You'll break a leg and lie for days before anyone knows you are hurt," said Cousin John.

"You'll be snowed in and no one will find you until spring," said Brother Henry.

"You are a city woman and not strong. What do you know of a pioneer's life? It is the most foolish plan we have ever heard of," chorused all.

"Of course, you will have a telephone."

"That I will not," I answered. "I want rest."

"At least you will have a good dog. That will be some protection."

"A dog would drive away all the wild things. I want to study them," I objected.

"Then, for mercy's sake, find some other woman to stay there with you. Surely there is another lunatic willing to freeze to death on the precious island. You should have a companion, if only to send for help."

"I don't want a companion," I protested, tearfully. "I won't be responsible for another person's comfort or safety. I will do this thing alone or not at all."

"I am tired to death," I stormed. "I need rest for at least one year. I want to watch the procession of the seasons in some place that is not all paved streets, city smells and noise. Instead of the honk of automobile horns, I want to hear the winds across the ice fields, instead of the smell of asphalt and hot gasoline, I want the odour of wet earth in boggy places. I have loved the woods all my life, I long to see the year go round there just once before I die."

At which outburst they shrugged exasperated shoulders and were silent, but each one drew me aside, at parting, and pressed a gift into my hand.

"Be sure to let us know if anything goes wrong. Write to us if you need the least thing. Don't be ashamed to come back, if the experiment proves a failure" — and so on and so on, God bless them!

The passage below is taken from My Father's Dragon, by Ruth Stiles Gannett. The paragraphs labelled A–F are in the wrong order. Put them into the correct order.

A	This surprised the cat — she had never before met anyone who cared about old alley cats — but she said, "I'd be very much obliged if I could sit by a warm furnace, and perhaps have a saucer of milk."

B	"Would you like to fly very, very much?" asked the cat.

C	My father and the cat became good friends but my father's mother was very upset about the cat. She hated cats, particularly ugly old alley cats. "Elmer Elevator," she said to my father, "if you think I'm going to give that cat a saucer of milk, you're very wrong. Once you start feeding stray alley cats you might as well expect to feed every stray in town, and I am not going to do it!"

D	On a cold rainy day when my father was a little boy, he met an old alley cat on his street. The cat was very drippy and uncomfortable so my father said, "Wouldn't you like to come home with me?"

E	This made my father very sad, and he apologised to the cat because his mother had been so rude. He told the cat to stay anyway, and that somehow he would bring her a saucer of milk each day. My father fed the cat for three weeks, but one day his mother found the cat's saucer in the cellar and she was extremely angry. She threw the cat out the door, but later on my father sneaked out and found the cat. Together they went for a walk in the park and tried to think of nice things to talk about. My father said, "When I grow up I'm going to have an airplane. Wouldn't it be wonderful to fly just anywhere you might think of!"

F	"We have a very nice furnace to sit by," said my father, "and I'm sure my mother has an extra saucer of milk."

The Ship's Adventure

by W. Clark Russell

In the following extract, Dr Hardy is saying goodbye to his son who is going away for a period of time.

A house with a wall, which would be blank but for a door and two steps, stands in a very pretty lane. The habitable aspect of the house is on the other side, and commands a wide prospect of sloping fields and river and green sweeps soaring into eminences thickly clothed with trees. A brass plate upon this lonely door bears the simple inscription, "Dr. Hardy".

The lane runs down to a bridge, and the flowing river carries the eye along a scene of English beauty: the bending trees sip the water's surface; the bright meadow stretches from the bank, and is tender and gay with the tints and movement of cattle; lofty trees sentinel the lane, and in the early summer the notes of the thrush and the blackbird are clear and sweet.

One autumn evening, at about seven o'clock, the door bearing Doctor Hardy's plate was pulled open, and a young fellow, with something nautical in his lurch and dress, stepped into the road and began to fill his pipe. Immediately behind him appeared another figure — he was a thin, pale, gentlemanly-looking man, and his white hair was parted down the middle. He gazed with a great deal of kindness, not unmingled with the shadow of sorrow, at the young fellow who was filling his pipe, and said:

"You have a pleasant evening for your walk."

"I am sorry to leave this place," said the young man. "There is nothing like this to be met on the open ocean."

Whilst he pulled out a matchbox, his eyes went away to the green, evening-clad hills, which showed between the trees in a sweep of sky-line pure as the rim of a coloured lens; and now two or three of the stars which shine upon our country, and which we all know and love, were trembling in the dark blue of the coming shadow.

"God bless you, Father," said he. "I shall be turning up and finding all well within twelve months, I hope."

"God bless you, my dear son, and I pray that he may continue to watch over you," said the white-haired old gentleman in a shaking voice.

30 The young man started to walk with his face set toward the hill. Doctor Hardy stood in the doorway watching him until he had disappeared round the bend. He then stepped back and closed the door upon himself.

The passage below is taken from 'The Narrative of the Mutiny of the Bounty', from Chamber's Miscellany of Useful and Entertaining Tracts. Read it carefully and then answer the questions that follow.

Saturday, 9th — About nine in the evening the clouds began to gather, and we had a prodigious fall of rain, with severe thunder and lightning. By midnight we caught about twenty gallons of water. Being miserably wet and cold, I served to the people a teaspoonful of rum each, to enable them to bear with their distressed situation. The weather continued extremely bad, and the wind increased; we spent a very miserable night, without sleep, except such as could be got in the midst of rain. The day brought no relief but its light. The sea broke over us so much that two men were constantly bailing; and we had no choice how to steer, being obliged to keep before the waves, for fear of the boat filling.

All Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the wet weather continued, with heavy seas and squalls. As there was no prospect of getting our clothes dried, my plan was to make everyone strip, and wring them through the salt water, by which means they received a warmth that, while wet with rain, they could not have. We were constantly shipping seas and bailing, and were very wet and cold during the night. The sight of the islands which we were always passing served only to increase the misery of our situation. We were very little better than starving, with plenty in view; yet to attempt procuring any relief was attended with so much danger, that prolonging of life, even in the midst of misery, was thought preferable, while there remained hopes of being able to surmount our hardships. For my own part, I considered the general run of cloudy and wet weather to be a blessing of providence. Hot weather would have caused us to have died of thirst, and probably being so constantly covered with rain or sea protected us from that dreadful calamity.

Answer the questions below by choosing the best answer.
Look at the passage again if you need to.

76 What made the daytime slightly more bearable than the night?

A the rain eased a little
B the wind died down
C they were able to sleep
D it wasn't as dark

77 'All Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday'

Why do you think the author has not just written, 'From Sunday to Friday'?

E in case the reader does not know the days of the week
F to emphasise how long the terrible weather went on for
G so we know the wet weather did not go on for weeks
H to try to increase the word count of the story

78 'The sight of the islands which we were always passing served only to increase the misery of our situation.'

Why do you think the islands had this effect on those aboard the boat?

I They realised how far away from land they were.
J They knew they would die of starvation before reaching the islands.
K Being so near to food sources but not being able to get the food was hard.
L The islands reminded them of home.

English Practice Test

Please mark boxes with a thin horizontal like this:

In the first example, on the left, the answer selected is C.

In the second example, on the right, the answer selected is J.

A line is drawn through the letter. It may go outside the brackets, but MUST NOT cross the outer border of the box.

Maths Practice Test

For multiple-choice questions, please mark boxes in the same way as shown above.

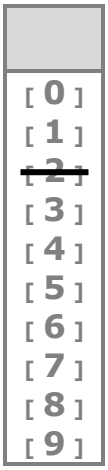

For questions that require numerical answers, there will be columns that represent units, tens, hundreds and thousands.

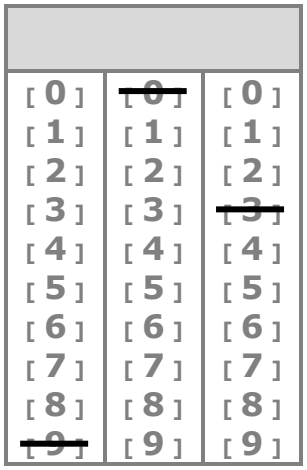

For a single-digit answer, there will be one column on the answer sheet in which to record your answer.

For a 2-digit answer, there will be two columns on the answer sheet.

For a 3-digit answer, there will be three columns on the answer sheet, and so on.

2022-2023 Edition. This product is licensed solely for the personal and private use of Paloma De Sande, 32 Hollington Crescent, New Malden, KT3 6RR, paloma_de_sande@hotmail.com.

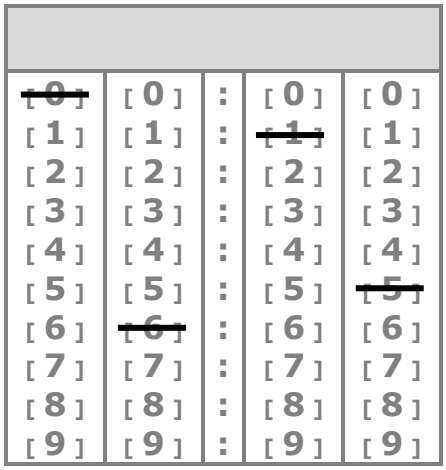

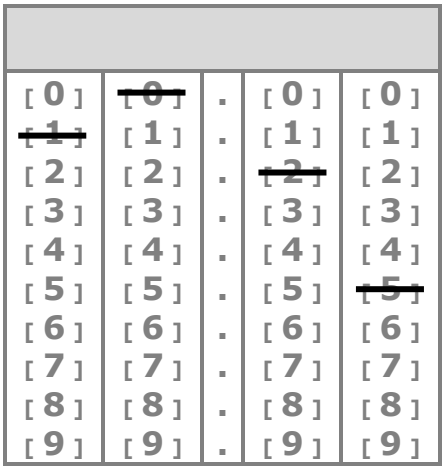

In the first example, on the left, a single-digit answer of 2 is marked.

In the second example, on the right, a 3-digit answer of 903 is marked.

A time answer would be given as a 4-digit answer like a 24-hour digital clock and a money answer would be given in pounds as a decimal number.

In the first example, on the left, an answer of quarter past 6 in the morning (06:15) is marked.

In the second example, on the right, an answer of 10 pounds and 25 pence (£10.25) is marked.

A line is drawn through each digit. It may go outside the brackets, but MUST NOT cross the outer border of the box.
